Welcome to Uppsala University!

For more than five centuries, Uppsala University has maintained its worldwide network of knowledge. As science knows no boundaries, international exchange and cooperation is part of our university's DNA. We are delighted to welcome you to be part of our ever growing global network.

International exchange and co-operation is a mean and a strategy for Uppsala University to achieve improved quality in research and education. As an international researcher, lecturer or doctoral student you are therefore most important to our University. You are a valued friend to all of us who carry out our work here on a permanent basis. Your presence in the lecture hall, in the classroom, in the laboratory or elsewhere has a direct impact on the work we do. On another level, being a researcher, lecturer or doctoral student in another country is a pledge to becoming a member of the global community of science and scholarship. It is no small task, but surely a worthy mission.

As Vice-Chancellor it is my distinct privilege and pleasure to welcome you to Uppsala University. I hope your stay in Uppsala will benefit your personal and professional development. Rest assured that your effort will be a valued contribution to the spirit of global learning.

Anders Hagfeldt
Vice-Chancellor of Uppsala University
