Experience of team leadership and project management

2009-2010

Workshop organisation at ECPR Joint Workshops Session 2009 in Lisbon and research group leadership (with Iver Neumann). Book published with Palgrave Macmillan (2012) in the SGIR Series at Palgrave.

2003-2009

Principal investigator of an international project on “Self-fulfilling geopolitics? An analysis of geopolitical thought in, and its consequences for, post Cold-War Europe” (Collaborators: Alexander Astrov and Natalia Morozova, Central European University, Budapest and Tartu University; Andreas Behnke, University of Reading; Pinar Bilgin, Bilkent University; Petr Drulák, Institute of International Studies, Prague; Merje Kuus, University of British Columbia, Canada; Elisabetta Brighi, Oxford University and Fabio Petito, University of Sussex; Serban Cioculescu, University of Bucharest, Ola Tunander, PRIO). Financially supported by the European COST A24. Seven peer-reviewed articles (in Cooperation and Conflict, Geopolitics, Political Geography, Security Dialogue) and one book chapter published between 2006-2011. The edited volume of the project has been published with Cambridge University Press (2012) in the Cambridge Studies in International Relations Series.

2000-2001, 2003-2005

Leader (with Anna Leander) of a research project on Alexander Wendt’s constructivist theory in international relations, funded by a CEU research grant and a COPRI travel/workshop grant. The research was published in a special issue of the Journal of International Relations and Development in 2001 and became the core of the reference book on Alexander Wendt and his critics, which we edited for Routledge (published 2006 in the New International Relations Series).

1997-99,

Head of International Relations and European Studies Department at the Central European University, Budapest. As such, I was responsible for the entire administrative and academic organisation of the department, including budget, curriculum and faculty development. During my headship, the programme was financially saved, got a new MA curriculum-structure, developed a new PhD curriculum (both are still in place), and was upgraded from a “programme” to an independent “department”. The external assessment of my department headship by the Open University was very positive over these years (external examiners were: Prof. John Baylis, now University of Wales, Swansea, and Prof. Michael L. Smith, formerly Queens University, Belfast).

During my years at the CEU, I was responsible for organising several Curriculum Development sessions in Budapest. Moreover, I was the local contact person in a project on curriculum development funded by the Volkswagen-Stiftung (1997-2000) and led by Prof. Klaus Segbers (Berlin) which materialised in the publication of a textbook for International Relations. Finally, I was invited to a special curriculum development workshop in Vilnius (March 2000) and as a special rapporteur of the Council of Europe Working Party on “Social Sciences and the Challenges of Transition” (1998).

Research collaboration

2010-2012

‘Liberal World Order’, funded by the British Academy and led by Tim Dunne (University of Queensland, Australia), Trine Flockhart (DIIS), Marjo Koivisto (Exeter, UK). The book was published by Oxford University Press in 2013.

2008-2010

‘Uses of The West : Security – Democracy – Order’, financed through the Excellence Cluster ‘Normative Orders’, University of Frankfurt (and with the support of Johns Hopkins’ SAIS, Bologna) and led by Gunther Hellmann and Benjamin Herborth. The research programme includes a book project (Publication forthcoming with Cambridge University Press)

2004-2005

United Nations University (UNU) and US Social Science Research Council (SSRC) project on ‘the future of multilateralism’, led by Edward Newman, Ramesh Thakur and John Tirman. Rapporteur on the relationship between unipolarity and multilateralism, later published in Multilateralism Under Challenge? Power, International Order and Structural Change, Tokyo et al.: United Nations University Press, 2006.

1997-2000

‘New Curricula for Teaching International Relations: A Task for Regional Institutions in Central and Eastern Europe’, VW-Stiftung funded and led by Klaus Segbers (Free University Berlin). Its results are published in: Klaus Segbers and Kerstin Imbusch, eds, The Globalization of Eastern Europe: Teaching International Relations Without Borders (Münster: Lit-Verlag, 2000). A revised version of my contribution was also published in the European Journal of International Relations.

1996-1997

‘The Politics of EMU’, led by Heikki Patomäki and financed through the Finnish Institute of International Affairs, published as Petri Minkinen and Heikki Patomäki (eds) The Politics of Economic and Monetary Union (Dordrecht: Kluwer Academic Publ., 1998), including a co-authored contribution of mine.

1996-1997

‘L’éthique en relations internationales’, led by Klaus-Gerd Giesen (then Université de Louvain) which resulted in a volume edited by him: L’éthique de l’espace politique mondial: métissages disciplinaires (Bruxelles: Bruylant, 1997), including a contribution of mine.

1993-1994

a TAPRI-funded research on ‘Peaceful change in World Politics’, led by Heikki Patomäki (then University of Turku) and resulting in a monograph with the same title (Tampere: TAPRI Research Report No. 71/1995). A revised version of my contribution was also published as Guzzini 1995.

1993-1994

COPRI/NISA funded research on major ‘figures of international thought’, led by Iver B. Neumann (then NUPI, Oslo) and Ole Wæver (then COPRI, Copenhagen) which resulted in an edited volume, entitled The Future of International Relations: Masters in the Making (London: Routledge, 1997), including a contribution of mine.
